THE WAR GOES ON

THE belligerents in Europe are as tenacious as ever, but it is clear enough that they are all tired. They would all be glad could something happen to bring about peace, but they are like a boy who has by both hands seized the knobs of a galvanic battery, completes the circuit and cannot let go. They are most uncomfortable, but the toy they seized in merriment holds them up to punishment, says Goodwin's Weekly.

The fighting still goes on, but the impetuous fury of the opening onset has changed to a sullen determination with accumulated hate to hold that determination fast until the end.

This we glean from the dispatches, but the strain upon the people behind the armies, the strain, the sorrow and the despair, we can form no conception of.

A weak hand with a match can start so great a conflagration that sometimes human effort is too feeble to arrest it, and it cannot be stopped until there is nothing left on which the flames can feed. The present conditions beyond the Atlantic seem to be of like nature. How can those nations stop the slaughter, the waste, the sorrow that is consuming them?

Who could write terms of peace that either belligerent would accept? England would say: "We live by trade, we cannot have that trade destroyed. We cannot live with the fear always before us that our ships and coasts are unsafe. We cannot consent to a peace which would still hold our tenure in India and Egypt under a menace; it always will be while Germany possesses a powerful navy."

France would say: "We have maintained our national individuality since the days of Charlemagne; we cannot be made a subject nation now."

Russia would say: "Since the days of our Catherine we have struggled for a free right of way through the Hellespont; it long ago should have been ours for what right has any power to lay its hands upon God's oceans and dictate what ships shall and shall not sail upon them?"

In the same way Germany would claim all rights for her people on land and sea and point out that inasmuch as all her land is occupied, she, too, must depend upon trade for progress and that no embargoes must be laid upon that trade.

The cries from Belgium and from Poland would be cries for vengeance and their demands would be for absolute independence.

It is easy to see how impossible would be the task of framing an acceptable peace adjustment.

Were Francis Joseph to suddenly die we believe it would concentrate all the German states under one rule, and set Hungary off an independent power, or were the rule to go to the house of Hohenzollern, Hungary might be retained and Bulgaria and Turkey in Europe might be annexed, free passage given Russia for her ships through the Dardanelles, Belgium restored and France guaranteed against further menace. The trouble then would be with Great Britain. She never would consent to any such a settlement, and France and Russia and Japan would be bound to stand by her. But then Francis Joseph is not dead, his kingdom is not divided, and—the war goes on without any promise of abatement visible anywhere.

LET NEVADA TAKE COUNSEL WITH ITSELF

NOW that Nevada is 51 years of age and is approaching the sere and yellow, it is about time to get down to self-communication and consider what we, the people of Nevada, have accomplished and what we plan for the future. The state is proud of its birth and exults over its record, even if we have been termed a "rotten borough" by political enemies in the east and our paucity of population has been caviled at.

Back east, where rivers flow and rains descend, where the soil is deep and markets are near, they have sneered at our efforts to cultivate our valleys. About the only thing that they can't argue against is our production of the noble and useful metals. Nevada will continue its output along these lines, while it will also demonstrate agricultural production in no mean manner.

The state has progressed so that its per capita wealth is the greatest in the world. It stands in the front ranks in literacy, having the largest per capita school fund of any state in the union. It possesses underground water flows that will enable it to irrigate its plains, while its mountains are giving forth their metallic treasures.

It remains, however, for Nevada to attain to commercial magnitude commensurate with its other resources. That can only be accomplished by a spirit of cooperation between merchants and newspapers, something that does not exist, except possibly in Reno, and the upbuilding of business in that city is proof of the efficaciousness of the plan. Then there should be a better response by the people when there is a meeting called for a matter of municipal progression. Tonopah is most particularly lax in that regard, while Goldfield is to be accredited with its willingness, even eagerness, to take concerted action when it is required or proves desirable.

Now that we, as a state, are 51 years old, it is time that we should establish a plan for mutual good, for a state is a commonwealth and all are benefited or injured when there is either a failure or a success in an attempt at concerted effort.

AN OPPORTUNITY IS PASSING

THERE are two varieties of mining stocks, the speculative and the investment. One is in unproven and the other in proven properties. Tonopah is in the latter class. There is scarcely an issue, if any, that is not assured of a return in time, either in appreciation of value or in dividend, the latter being the most reasonable outcome of the property. Tonopah is paying dividends today aggregating about 40 per cent of the output of the properties, and the mines are producing at the rate of $11,000,000 a year, even with silver at its low level, with assurance of an output of $250,000 a week or better when silver reaches the figure which it will preserve with normal conditions prevailing.

Tonopah shares are a wonderful investment at present and will possess even more attractiveness in the future, with the zone being extended both easterly and westerly. There will be an awakening soon in the Tonopah stock market and when it comes there will be a feeling of deep regret that the present opportunity was permitted to pass unaccepted and with no advantage taken.

LOCAL SUPPORT SHOULD BE GIVEN

IT IS regrettable that the Nevada Film Co., Incorporated, of Tonopah, is compelled to go away from the town to secure subscriptions to its capital stock in order that it may have the funds wherewith to start operations. There is a lot of idle money in Tonopah, even though many of the beneficiaries of the mining operations send their money abroad. Much of the money that is idle here is like the talent that is wrapped in the napkin, earning no interest.

It would seem that if an undertaking, planned for the benefit of the community, were to be launched, it would receive stronger local support. There are many reasons why Tonopah should be the locale for western plays. It has an atmosphere that needs no filtering. Last month it had 93 per cent of sunshine. It has the proper setting for plays that appeal. If the Nevada Film Co. is compelled to seek a new site for its operations, the loss will be that of Tonopah, rather than that of the company itself.

MINING COMPANY WINS CLAIM JUMPING CASE

A suit growing out of the relocation of mining claims owned by the Peerless Gold Mining company by R. K. Hartzel and James Vaughn in which the two latter are plaintiffs and the mining company defendants, was heard and determined Wednesday before Judge Hart, judgment being entered for the defendant company, L. A. Gibson appearing for the defendant company and J. G. Sweeney for the plaintiffs. The property is located in the Como district and is owned by local men who formed the Peerless Gold Mining company. They are Gurney Gordon, Clyde Garret and H. C. Cutler.—Reno Journal.

BIG SHIPMENT OF QUICKSILVER IS MADE

Last Saturday the Nevada Cinnabar company, of Lone, south of Austin, shipped 285 flasks of quicksilver over the Nevada Central railroad. The metal was consigned to New York where it is retailed to local consumers. The metal is now selling at over $100 per flask of 75 pounds in first hands, says the Reveille.

The plant at Lone is running full blast and the company has ore enough in sight to run the furnaces for many months to come.
